

There is no definitive monitor for busyness at Strom. People who want to go to the gym have no indication of how busy it is until they get there. This leads to situations where someone goes only to find that it is too busy for them to do what they were planning on doing, and they have to either settle for something other than their preferred routine, wait around for a long time, or leave and try again later.